Trenton's Great Murder Mystery
Baffles the Detectives.

Miss Purcell's Story of Burglars Discredited by the Police.

Suspicion Upon Dr. Kniffin and the Pretty Typewriter.

and rumors Dr. Kniffin, husband of the dead woman, moves about, the cynosure of all eyes, shadowed by detectives and severely commented upon by the people at large.

DR. KNIFFIN ON THE SCENE.

He returned home from his hurried trip to Warren County, N. J., from his home, at 8 o'clock last night.

He had been notified of his wife's sad end by telegram sent him at 7 o'clock.

Dr. Kniffin is a good-looking fellow less than forty, who loves good living, fast horses, and is also said to have an eye for a woman.

Rumor has it that on the latter account he and his wife did not live as happily as they might have done.

When he stopped at the cars Detectives Pigler and Leahy accosted him and invited him to take a walk.

He accompanied them to Police Headquarters.

On the train a lady and a child had been with him, but he leaped off alone.

It was given out that he had gone to Broadway to look at a farm with a view to purchasing it.

RELATIONS WITH MISS PURCELL.

It is understood that this farm adjoins one owned by Miss Purcell's parents, and

SCENE OF THE MURDER.

that it was at the same place he was on the night of Nov. 30, when his house was alleged to have been entered by burglars before.

At that time Miss Purcell told a thrilling tale of masked men in her bedroom, who cowed her with knives and revolvers, and after all she only got away with a few dollars and a ring.

As was stated in the full story of the tragedy told in yesterday's EVENING WORLD, Miss Purcell is a typewriter by occupation and a cousin of the murdered woman.

From all accounts she and Dr. Kniffin were good friends, too good, it is hinted, to please Mrs. Kniffin, and her presence in the household was the cause of more trouble than good.

Dr. Kniffin denies this, but admits that he was with her at the Philadelphia depot on Tuesday, but he claims the meeting was an accident, one that they only conversed together a few moments.

When asked where the young lady had been the doctor said she was returning from a New Year call on her parents at Broadway and was waiting for a train at Philadelphia for Trenton while he was waiting for one to take him to Broadway.

MRS. MYRA KNIFFIN.

the burglars is a mythical one, and look in higher places for the real murderer, or murders.

The tragedy has stirred up this community as no similar crime has ever done.

The high standing of all the parties concerned, and the suspicion which has unavoidably fallen on some of those most closely connected with the dead woman, renders the case intensely interesting to every one.

The mystery increases with every passing moment.

The police are moving slowly. They have drawn a line within which they feel sure the guilty one or ones, but they fear to act decisively without stronger evidence than they now possess.

Their strongest reason for disbelieving the burglar story lies in the fact that nothing was stolen from the house, although everything in it was turned topsy-turvy, and there were no indications of a forcible entrance.

CRIMES WHICH NO ONE HEARD.

Miss Purcell says that when she was aroused by Mrs. Kniffin's struggles the latter was crying "Help, murder!" at the top of her voice, and yet no one in the neighborhood heard the least unusual sound from the house during the night and most interestingly, and most mysteriously, at a bank directly opposite the Kniffin residence who neither saw nor heard any commotion about the place during his four duty.

Miss Purcell has made several conflicting statements.

After her first story she told another one, saying that she had been awakened at the bedroom door, and that it was the noise of the burglars shoving the door open that she heard, and that she sprang from the bed to a window, when the intruder got in.

Nevertheless, she can give no description of her assailant except to say that she thinks he was a negro, because, she thinks, one of his hands was black.

Again she claims that when Dentist Shannon, Dr. Kniffin's partner, found her on the floor yesterday morning she was not unconscious, but inert, deprived of the power of movement, until he touched her and revived her dormant faculties.

She says the burglars entered the house between 3 and 4 A. M., and it was not until nearly 8 A. M. that Dr. Shannon found her unconscious on the floor.

Chloroform was not used, for she says such a condition for nearly four hours in the midst of all these conjectures

FIGHTING FIRE, NOT WAVES.

La Champagne's Sailing Delayed by Burning Cotton in Her Cargo.

Sleeping Passengers Aroused, but No Panic Ensued.

The steamship La Champagne, of Le Compagnie Generale Transatlantique, did not sail for La Belle France at 1 o'clock this morning as advertised. Some of her passengers were ashore, not to Paris.

The majority stayed on board the ship, however, ready to sail whenever fate would let her, and hoping that no such streak of ill-luck was at hand as pursued the French steamers a dozen years ago, almost to the destruction of the line.

La Champagne was at her pier, foot of Morton street, North River, her passengers all aboard and cargo stored, ready to start at 4 o'clock, when, within ten minutes of the hour set, an alarm of fire was raised.

Some cotton in her hold was afire.
Eighty or ninety bales were stacked in one compartment, and among them flames had been seen dodging.

Night-watchman Richard Hoffmann sent an alarm that brought the engines to stop in five minutes. Lines of hose were stretched 500 feet to the deck and over the side of the huge vessel down into her hold.

The fire broke out in the hold of the ship, and the firemen were sent down into the hold also. Long after the blaze was out it kept pouring water into the compartment until the cotton bales were soaked and swelled through and through.
Then the pumps were set to work.

The sleeping passengers were aroused by the noise and confusion. They were sent to sleep again, thinking the ship was merely getting under way. Of those who understood the situation the great majority remained on board, and impossible spectators of what was going on.

A few lady passengers were frightened and rushed on deck, and through the lines of police and employees of the Company that immediately closed behind them, although none but the women and children were allowed to go ashore.

The ship was still at her pier at sunrise, with the Zephyr still yet at her side. The police reported that the damage done by the fire would not exceed $200.

The fire broke out again about 10 o'clock this forenoon, and engines were again stopped, and the pumps were set to work flooding the compartments containing the cotton. The ship's officers and agents declare that the fire was once overcome, but it broke out again, and the ship has gotten out to sea.

BOGART WILL NOT ACCEPT.

Mayor Grant Offered Him the Street-Cleaning Commissioner's Ship.

No appointment of a Street-Cleaning Commissioner will be made to-day.

Mayor Grant told an EVENING WORLD reporter at noon that the position had been tendered to State Engineer John Bogart, but that he had not yet decided upon any other candidate to fill the position.

In his recent declining of the same appointment Mr. Bogart said that his refusal was necessitated by reason of his official position, and that he was not available for the duties of the Street-Cleaning Commissioner.

The returning Commissioner is a civil engineer, and Mayor Grant has been trying to persuade him to accept the same position, but it is said that failing in this he has in reserve another candidate, who will prove acceptable for the duties of the Street-Cleaning Commission.

Mr. Bogart is a civil engineer, and is now in charge of the Public Works Department of the City of New York.

At a meeting of the Board of Public Works last night, Mayor Grant was the subject of discussion, and it was decided to tender the position of Street-Cleaning Commissioner to John Bogart.

"IDEMAN" TURNER IN TOWN.

The Young Congressman on His Way Back to Washington.

Congressman Charles H. Turner, who graduated six weeks ago from an ice wagon, has returned from New Hampshire, where he spent the holidays with his father at his birthplace, Wentworth.

Mr. Turner, to be in fashion, has had a slight attack of the Grip, but he will return to Washington to-night.

"Washington is a beautiful city," said the young Congressman to an EVENING WORLD reporter this morning. "I have had but two weeks' experience there, hardly enough to form a very adequate impression—but I find Washington people to be universally courteous, and I have met in my brief career there more bright, intellectual men in Congress and out, and especially among the newspaper men, than I ever met before."

Congressman Turner, as being simply a big convention. There is the same hot temperament and wire-pulling, and compromising and political maneuvering that is so familiar in conventions."

"I am of the opinion that the Committee on Legislation of this city will need the services of a man of the kind of which we get the Fair for New York," replied Mr. Turner.

"I hope to obtain admission to their meeting at Mr. Turner's office this afternoon. While the eight New York City members of Congress are working like beavers, I must say that there should be more work."

tee on Legislation of this city will need

FATAL SNOW-SLIDE.

Seven People Crushed and Killed in the Mass.

Two Yet Missing Who May Be Victims of the Slide.

Four Houses and a Church Wrecked and Trees Cleared Away.

STARK CITY, Jan. 4.—As far as at present known the snowslide of yesterday down the mountain side caused the death of seven people, as follows:

Mrs. RICH, her little son and her daughter.

Mrs. RYAN, of Downsville.

Mrs. J. T. MOONEY and her daughter, Miss ETHEL LANGDON.

There are several others injured, and a Chinaman and a little girl are missing.

The slide came down from Butte's Flume and accumulated such force as to crush four houses and wreck a church, besides clearing away all the trees in its pathway.

It is feared that another and greater slide may yet come.

LONDON AND "LA GRIPPE."

Commercial Houses Crippled by the Sickness of Employees.

LONDON, Jan. 4.—The influenza mallains a firm grip on the English metropolis.
The London hospitals are overcrowded, and at once the doctors and nurses are suffering from the disease in its most acute form.

All commercial houses are seriously crippled by the illness of employees.

The London and Westminster Bank has suffered from the disease in its most acute form.

And in the case of the commercial victims, the dreaded disease has made serious inroads among the ballet girls playing in the vantomme of "Cinderella" at Her Majesty's Theatre.

The Prince, in the pantomime, too, is incapacitated, and as his understudy has followed his example, Miss Minnie Palmer, the Cinderella, was last night compelled to de-claim her lines to a reading audience.

BUTCHERY!

An Insane Father Kills His Wife and Child and Then Suicides.

The Child Strangled and the Mother Shot.

An "other" double murder and suicide has been added to the bloody deeds which have characterized the opening of the new year.

Edward Katzenstein, a bookkeeper, residing at 98 Ewen street, Brooklyn, E. D., reported to the police that a man named Franken, who lived with his wife and three-year-old daughter at 190 Mauger street, had not been seen by his neighbors since Tuesday, and that Mrs. Franken and her child had not been seen in the house since Wednesday, and that there was something suspicious about their apartments.

A policeman was despatched to the house.

He peered through a rear window and descried Franken sitting on a bed with a huge revolver in his hand.

The policeman demanded admittance, when Franken leveled his revolver at him and threatened to shoot.

His manner was so determined that the policeman beat a hasty retreat for the purpose of summoning help.

He had gone but a few steps when he heard a pistol shot, and returning to the window, saw Franken lying on the bed, blood pouring from a wound directly over the heart.

Raising the window the policeman entered the room.

One glance sufficed to show him that the man was dead.

On a bed in the rear room he found Mrs. Franken lying on the bed, black from decomposition, the odor from the decaying corpse being almost overpowering.

Beside her lay the body of her three-year-old daughter, also in an advanced stage of decomposition.

The woman's hands were crossed as if laid out for burial.

On the table were several letters written by Franken, in one of which he says that finding it difficult to get along, and having no money, his wife and he had agreed to die.

He says he gave her thirty-five grains of morphine and the child six grains.

A package of Paris green lay upon the table, evidently for use in case the morphine failed to work.

Franken was an upholsterer by trade, but had done no work for the past two months.

The house where the deed was committed is a little one-story frame building in the rear of a tenement-house.

Franken rented it two months ago, but had been unable to pay the last month's rent.

He is said to have been a New York Park policeman up to within a year ago.
Mrs. Franken and the child had evidently been dead since Tuesday, as they were not seen since that day.

The bodies have been placed in the care of an undertaker.

Those of Mrs. Franken and her daughter must be buried at once, as they are so decayed.

The tragedy has caused the wildest excitement, and horrified neighbors gather around the house and discuss the affair in awe-struck tones.

HER DEATH-BED IN A CELL.

Murderess Hanna Southworth Dying in the Tombs To-Day.

Mrs. Southworth's condition, as reported to-day by Dr. Chetwood, the Tombs physician, is extremely critical, and he believes that the gradual sinking into a comatose state, which usually terminates in death, has already begun.

She is so weak that she can scarcely speak, and very little nourishment, except the drugs and stimulants prescribed for her by the doctor, has passed her lips.

"I understand from what Dr. Chet-wood tells me confidentially," said Warden O'Connor this morning to an EVENING WORLD reporter, "that the prisoner cannot be kept alive for another week."

"Her condition this morning was so weak that yesterday that any attempt to remove her now would undoubtedly kill her, and I never expect to see her leave the Tombs alive."

"For several days she has not been able to eat or drink, and she has been sinking rapidly, and her condition is very critical, and she is now in a comatose
